

Website updates — what was done

blushpicnic.com · 7 October 2026 · Live since deploy run #10 (pull request #6)

This report lists the fixes and improvements made to the website today after a full audit of the live code: every page was built and crawled at phone and desktop sizes, all links and anchors were checked, colour contrast was measured, and two code reviews (booking flow; pages, SEO and configuration) were run. Everything below is merged, tested and live. A short recap of the earlier rounds follows at the end.

1. Booking form bugs fixed

- No more duplicate bookings. If the mail server is slow, the form used to give up after 15 seconds, show “timed out”, and a customer pressing “Try again” sent you a second, identical booking with a different reference. The form now waits 50 seconds (longer than the server’s own email budget), and the server recognises a repeat of the same request within 10 minutes and answers with the first reference instead of emailing you twice.
- Time field no longer traps customers. On browsers without a built-in time picker, typing “4:30 PM” (the example the form itself suggested) was rejected. Both “16:30” and “4:30 pm” style answers are now accepted.
- Phone extensions accepted. A number like “416 555 0123 ext 12” passed the browser but was refused by the server after the customer had completed every step. Both sides now agree.
- Dates have the same limits everywhere. Event dates must be within 3 years; other dates (a wedding date, a birth date) between 1900 and 5 years ahead. The browser now enforces the same rules the server already did, so nobody gets an error only at the very end.
- Letter-board word limit has one source. Changing letterBoardMaxWords in settings.yaml now changes it for the browser and the server together.
- “Too many attempts” notice now shows the server’s own advice (text us) instead of a generic “wait a minute”, since the real pause is an hour.
- Occasion lock guard. If a typo ever creeps into the form definition, the server no longer forces an occasion the form doesn’t offer.

2. Pricing and estimate consistency

- Cents are printed only when there are cents (e.g. $22.50), identically in the live estimate and in your email.
- A price or travel fee of 0 is now refused by the content check instead of printing “$0” on the site. Use a blank (null) for “quoted”.
- The package line in the estimate uses the guestsLabel wording from packages.yaml in both the browser and the email.

3. Analytics accuracy (GA4 / Meta Pixel, after consent)

- booking_step now counts only forward moves through the form. It used to fire on every page load, on “Back” and when a server error re-showed a step, which would have inflated funnel numbers.
- booking_submit is now sent from the thank-you page, so navigating away from the form can’t cancel it. It fires exactly once, not again on reload.
- TikTok link clicks now count as a Contact event in Meta, like calls, texts and Instagram.

4. Content accuracy

- The security-deposit sentence (home page steps and thank-you page) now says it applies to picnics, proposals and room decor, so hamper customers never read about a deposit that doesn't apply to them, even with JavaScript off.
- The gallery's Birthday photo #5 was a byte-for-byte copy of the home-page hero photo under a second name. It now points at the one file (one less image to download).

5. Search engines, performance and hosting

- Requesting /404 directly now returns a real "404 Not Found" status instead of a 200 (a "soft 404", which Google dislikes).
- Structured data (JSON-LD) now uses the home URL with the trailing slash, matching the canonical tag.
- Added max-image-preview:large so Google may show large photo previews from the site.
- Cache headers are now also sent on "304 Not Modified" responses (Apache needs "Header always set" for that).
- Hero images decode asynchronously so a large photo never blocks the page.
- Shorter page titles for /policies and /book (both were over the 60-character guideline).

6. Accessibility

- While the mobile menu is open, the page behind it is made inert: keyboard and screen-reader users can no longer wander into covered content.
- Checked and confirmed, no change needed: one heading per page, logical heading order, all images have descriptions, every text colour passes WCAG AA contrast, no horizontal scrolling on a 320 px phone, all links and anchors resolve.

7. Verification

Check	Result
Build and type check	Clean, 0 errors
Booking handler tests (PHP)	118 passed (4 new: duplicate guard, phone extensions)
Browser tests (Playwright, phone + desktop)	46 passed
GitHub CI on the pull request	Green on both jobs
Deploy to Hostinger (run #10)	Succeeded, live-site checks passed

8. Waiting on you

Two lines of copy were written as our best reading of your brief and need a yes or no (also listed in HANDOVER.md under "Waiting on you"):

- Room decor "at home, in a hotel or in a rental" (the booking form also offers "Hotel room" and "Airbnb or rental"): are those places you decorate?
- The last line of /policies, "By paying your booking deposit and security deposit, you acknowledge and agree to these booking terms and policies": keep or remove?

Still open from before: prices for travel by area, dome picnic, table & chair setup and the unpriced add-ons; Simple Picnic inclusions and extra-guest price; hamper contents and prices; About-page story and photo; alcohol policy; payment methods; GA4 / Meta IDs; real photos to replace the AI stand-ins. If old pages still show after a deploy, clear the Hostinger cache once.
